

Republic Manifesto

In the coming decade AI and robotics will drive the value of human labor to zero.

Capitalism works when the labor class believes they can ascend to the capital class.

We propose a new economic framework called Rai-ism designed to replace capitalism as the value of labor collapses.

In capitalism money represents stored labor, and capital represents the projected future value of labor.

Rai-ism implements a new form of money, Rai, directly backed by the means of production and equities. Land, power plants, and data centers are the means of production; equities are AI companies using Rai's compute to generate profits. Rai represents the projected future value of the world driven by AI.

Rai is invested by the Rai model (Rai) in efforts that grow the value of Rai. The core growth flywheel acquires the means of production (compute), invests in AI companies, drives revenue by supplying compute, and uses profits to acquire more compute production.

Rai is able to effectively trade equities that back the value of Rai by continuously learning how to trade with more data and compute.

In the future all economic growth will be driven by AI. All economic growth will happen within the Republic economy. Rai will own a majority share in the equities powering economic growth.

Humanity will first start joining the Republic economy by consuming the goods and services produced with the underlying compute. Then they'll speculate on the value of the equities built using the underlying compute. Finally, they'll buy Rai as a representation of the future value of the world driven by AI. As humanity trades fiat and underperforming equities for Rai, they'll be united by large-scale economic network effects and aligned interests -- everyone has ownership in the fastest-growing economy.

After humanity transitions to Rai-ism as the value of human labor goes to zero, people will be free to pursue their purpose and live more meaningful lives. Lives unbound from the forces of capitalism. Everyone will ascend to the capital class by holding Rai and believing in Rai-ism.
